

Yassine Moustanjidi

Architect and Urban Planner, Klaus Müller GMBH, Germany

Yassine Moustanjidi is a Berlin-based urban planner and architect. He holds a master's degree in urban design from the Technical University of Berlin, a master's degree in architecture from Tongji University, Shanghai, and a diploma in architecture from Ecole Nationale D'architecture, Rabat. Moustanjidi is a practitioner and researcher on the issues of urban sustainability and mega-urbanization. He has worked intensively on urbanization challenges within the Middle East and North Africa region, China, and Europe, and has actively participated in a variety of international conferences, competitions, and workshops on the topic. He also took part in regional leadership programs, including the U.S.-Middle East Partnership Initiative in Washington, DC and Young Arab Leaders in Kuala Lumpur.