

Kemal Derviř

Senior Fellow in the Global Economy and Development Program, Brookings Institution

Kemal Derviř is Senior Fellow in the Global Economy and Development Program and the Edward M. Bernstein Scholar at the Brookings Institution, Washington, DC. He is also Senior Advisor at Sabanci University in Istanbul. He was Executive Head of the UNDP; member of the Turkish Parliament, representing his native city of Istanbul; and Minister for Economic Affairs and the Treasury of the Republic of Turkey, responsible for Turkey's recovery programme after the devastating financial crisis that hit the country in February 2001. He was also a Vice-President of the World Bank. In 2003, he was a member of the Convention for the Future of Europe, meeting in Brussels representing Turkey's parliamentary opposition (the CHP).

Dr. Derviř earned his Bachelor's (First Class Honours) and Master's Degrees (with Distinction) from the London School of Economics, and his Ph.D. in economics from Princeton University. He has published several books and many articles in academic journals as well as current affairs publications, in English, Turkish, French and German, on topics ranging from mathematical models of economic growth to macro-economic policy, social mobility and income distribution, international trade, European affairs, global governance and climate change. Books include "Inequality in America: Facts, Trends, and International Perspectives" (2012) co-authored with others, "A Better Globalization: Legitimacy, Governance and Reform" (2005), "Europe's Crisis, Europe's Future" (2014) co-edited with Jacques Mistral, and "G20 at Five: Time for Strategic Leadership" (2014) co-edited with Peter Drysdale. Kemal Derviř has a monthly column published in many languages in newspapers around the world by Project Syndicate. A collection of these articles with additional overviews entitled "Reflections on Progress: Essays on the Global Political Economy" was published by the Brookings Press in 2016.
