Jim Hoagland has served in a variety of reporting, editing, and opinion-forming roles at The Washington Post since joining the newspaper in 1966. Winner of two Pulitzer prizes and other journalism honors, he became a Contributing Editor to the Post in January 2010, after serving two decades as Associate Editor and Chief Foreign Correspondent.

Hoagland was born in Rock Hill, South Carolina on January 22, 1940. He graduated with an A.B. in Journalism from the University of South Carolina in 1961 and was elected to the Phi Beta Kappa. He did graduate work in Aix-en-Provence, France during the 1961-1962 academic year. He was a Ford Foundation Fellow at Columbia University's School of Journalism 1968-1969. He has been an Annenberg distinguished fellow at Stanford University's Hoover Institution since 2010.

He was awarded the rank of chevalier in the French Legion of Honor in 2004 and named as an officier in the Legion in 2010.

Hoagland is married to novelist Jane Stanton Hitchcock and has two children, Lily and Lee.