MESSAGE DU PRÉSIDENT ET FONDATEUR

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT AND FOUNDER

La World Policy Conference (WPC) a été fondée il y a quatre ans comme un club ouvert, bien sûr ancré dans la culture française et européenne, mais véritablement international. Sa mission est de discuter à la fois des chances et des risques qu'offre un monde ouvert et d'identifier les conditions dans lesquelles les relations internationales pourraient être mieux organisées afin d'assurer la stabilité structurelle d'un tel monde.

Ce club entend donner la parole non seulement aux grandes puissances, mais aussi et surtout aux moyennes et même aux petites, et donc aux pays émergents, en réunissant une variété d'acteurs. En utilisant le vocabulaire en vogue au début de ce siècle, la WPC traite de la gouvernance mondiale et de la pérennité de la mondialisation.

Il se trouve que la première édition de la WPC, en Octobre 2008, a coïncidé avec la faillite de Lehman Brothers et le début de la crise économique et financière la plus grave depuis la Grande Dépression. Au cours des quatre dernières années, de nombreux événements politiques, comme le «printemps arabe», ont également montré qu'un monde plat et paisible n'est pas pour demain, même si les valeurs libérales et démocratiques finiront par prévaloir sur le long terme ; que les relations internationales vont continuer de concerner au premier chef les nations, les États et la façon dont ils perçoivent leurs identités et leurs intérêts collectifs ; que dans la réalité, les relations économiques sont asymétriques et ne ressemblent guère aux marchés parfaits des manuels scolaires ; que les marchés financiers ne sont pas toujours rationnels, mais peuvent être gagnés par le stress ou même le chaos ; que les cycles économiques ont peu de chances de disparaître de sitôt, etc. Le mécanisme d'action-réaction est en marche, et les tentations du nationalisme et du protectionnisme peuvent revenir, même dans la région la plus intégrée du monde - l'Union européenne. L'ère de l'enthousiasme idéologique pour la mondialisation est terminée, et nous pourrions avoir à affronter le risque de jeter le bébé avec l'eau du bain.

Pour la WPC, la priorité n'est pas de spéculer en termes abstraits sur la mondialisation et la gouvernance mondiale, mais de regarder le monde réel de manière constructive, dans le but de préserver et de conforter, pour la plupart des parties, les avantages de l'ouverture, tant à court qu'à long terme.

The World Policy Conference (WPC) was founded four years ago as an open club, and while it is certainly rooted in European and French culture, it is genuinely international. Its mission is to discuss both the opportunities and the risks of an open world and to identify the conditions under which international relations could be better organized to ensure structural stability in such a world.

This club intends to give the floor not only to major powers, but also and indeed primarily to medium and even small, or emerging countries, and to associate a variety of stakeholders. Using the vocabulary in vogue at the beginning of this century, the WPC was said to be about global governance and the sustainability of globalization.

It so happened that the first edition of the WPC, in October 2008, coincided with the bankruptcy of Lehman Brothers and the beginning of the most serious financial and economic crisis since the Great Depression. In the last four years, numerous political events, such as the so-called "Arab Spring", have also shown that the world is unlikely to become flat anytime soon, even if liberal and democratic values should prevail in the long run; that international relations continue to be primarily about nations, States and the way they perceive their identities and collective interests; that real asymmetric economic relations do not look like the perfect markets of text books; that financial markets are not always rational and can experience stress or even chaos; that economic cycles are unlikely to be abolished anytime soon; and so forth and so on. The action-reaction mechanism is on the move, and the temptation of nationalism and protectionism may return, even within the most integrated region in the world - the European Union. The era of ideological enthusiasm for globalization is over, and we might have to face the risk of throwing the baby out with the bathwater.

For the WPC, the priority is not to speculate in abstract terms about globalization and global governance, but to look constructively at the real world with the intention of preserving and deepening the short and long term benefits, for most parties, of openness.

À cette fin, nous devons rechercher des règles du jeu acceptables qui combinent les vertus de la sécurité collective et de l'équilibre des pouvoirs, et ce dans les deux domaines, politique et économique. L'acceptabilité est la tâche la plus difficile. Elle implique une compréhension commune sur la manière d'améliorer le système des Nations Unies et d'autres organisations telles que le FMI. Dans cette cinquième édition de la WPC, nous avons choisi de nous concentrer sur quelques questions concrètes plutôt que de nous attaquer directement à des problèmes institutionnels sauf peut-être au sujet de l'avenir de l'Union européenne et dans d'autres cas où de grandes questions institutionnelles seront clairement dans le sujet. Sur la question de la gouvernance économique, par exemple, les meilleures idées peuvent être gaspillées si le processus de prise de décision est bancal, comme c'est actuellement le cas dans la zone euro. Par ailleurs, les failles du système des Nations Unies et la faiblesse de ses organisations régionales ont leur part de responsabilité dans le fait que les transitions au Moyen-Orient soient aussi douloureuses - et même atroces dans le cas de la Syrie. À défaut d'une solution optimale, difficilement imaginable dans un avenir proche, comment pouvons-nous concevoir des solutions de rechange sans retomber dans les tragédies de l'équilibre des puissances à la mode du XIX^e siècle ?

On soulignera également l'importance de la session «Bonne gouvernance et réussite économique», qui a pour objet la relation entre politique et économie. C'est en effet une voie à double sens. Je tiens également à souligner le fait que, cette année, nous avons décidé de renforcer le rôle des ateliers, chacun traitant d'aspects fondamentaux de la gouvernance mondiale. Deux ateliers sont thématiques (finance et énergie), tandis que le troisième est transversal et portera sur le thème des risques majeurs (un sujet qui n'est pas absent des autres ateliers). Le niveau actuel de la mondialisation rend la matérialisation de tels risques beaucoup plus probables que, par exemple, à l'époque de la Guerre froide.

Nous espérons que, en discutant en toute bonne foi et dans le respect mutuel, en évitant les passions, en donnant la primauté à la raison et en n'oubliant jamais qu'il est très facile de glisser vers la misère et la guerre, et en adoptant une vision large de l'intérêt général, les participants à la cinquième édition de la WPC contribueront à ce que notre monde soit un peu meilleur.

To that end, we must seek acceptable rules of the game that combine the virtues of collective security and the balance of power, both in the political and economic domains. Acceptability is the most difficult task. It implies a common understanding of how to improve the UN system and other organizations such as the IMF. In this fifth edition of the WPC, we have chosen to concentrate on a few concrete issues rather than tackle institutional questions directly – except perhaps when dealing with the future of the EU, and in other cases the broader institutional issues will remain clearly in context. On the issue of economic governance, for instance, the best economic ideas can be lost if the decision-making process is awkward, as is currently the case in the Euro zone. In another instance, the flaws of the UN system and the weakness of its regional organizations account for the painful – and in the case of Syria even atrocious – transitions in the Middle East. Short of a first best solution, which is hardly imaginable in the near future, how can we think of second best options without going back to pure nineteenth century-like balance of power tragedies?

It is also worth drawing attention to the session “Good Governance and Economic Success”, which is meant to address the important relationship between politics and economics. This is indeed a two-way street. I also want to emphasize the fact that, this year, we are strengthening the role of the workshops, each dealing with key aspects of global governance. Two workshops are thematic (finance and energy), while the third is transversal and focuses on the subject of major risks (a subject which is not absent from the other workshops). Indeed, the present level of globalization makes such risks much more likely than, say, at the time of the Cold War.

It is our hope, that by debating in good faith and mutual respect, eschewing passions, resorting to reason and never forgetting that it is all too easy to slip toward misery and war, and encompassing broad visions of general interests, the participants of the fifth edition of the WPC will contribute to making our world a bit better.

THÈMES DES SESSIONS

CONFERENCE THEMES

Austrian President Heinz Fischer delivers the opening remarks at the WPC's 4th Edition in Vienna, 2011.

Session plénière 1. Gouvernance économique mondiale

La mondialisation a été initialement perçue comme une transformation irréversible vers un monde uniforme et plat, mais prospère. C'était comme si, du moins d'un point de vue économique, les prétendus « obstacles » des identités nationales ou régionales devaient être abolis. Comme si le monde entier était destiné à devenir un marché unique, régulé par des organisations internationales et dirigé par des technocrates supposés compétents. Depuis la crise financière et économique des cinq dernières années, nous observons des tendances bien différentes : davantage d'agressivité dans l'affirmation des identités collectives, une demande accrue de renationalisation des politiques économiques, des pressions protectionnistes, etc. Cette évolution est perceptible, même dans le cadre très intégré de l'Union européenne. L'idée que la mondialisation est irréversible ne peut plus être considérée comme juste. L'objet de cette session est d'évaluer la stabilité du système économique mondial et de faire des recommandations sur la façon de la renforcer, afin de préserver les bénéfices d'un monde ouvert, tout en répondant aux revendications politiques de préservation des identités collectives et de justice sociale.

Session plénière 2. G2 ?

Même s'il est probable que les États-Unis vont rester la seule superpuissance dans l'avenir prévisible, la Chine est devenue un challenger crédible. Elle est maintenant la deuxième économie du monde et, sauf accident économique ou politique, elle pourrait passer au premier rang dans les prochaines décennies. Non seulement elle se dote de tous les attributs de la puissance, mais elle se comporte de plus en plus comme une puissance, au sens classique du terme, du moins vis-à-vis de ses voisins. Les deux pays sont assez allergiques au multilatéralisme, mais alors que les États-Unis ont développé un sens du leadership au cours du XX^e siècle, la Chine n'a pas eu une telle expérience historique. Ils se font une rude concurrence économique, mais aussi politique, en particulier, mais pas exclusivement, en Asie. Se dirigent-ils vers une confrontation ? Ou, au contraire, pourrait-il y avoir une sorte de « détente, entente, et coopération », pour reprendre l'ancien vocabulaire de la guerre froide - c'est à dire une sorte de G2 ? Comment un tel G2 pourrait-il être acceptable pour le reste du monde ? Quelles forces décideront de l'option qui l'emportera ?

Session plénière 3.

Le président Mario Monti nous présentera sa vision de la gouvernance mondiale.

Session plénière 4. L'avenir de l'UE

L'Union européenne est, au niveau régional, un laboratoire unique pour la gouvernance mondiale. Pourtant, au cours des dernières années, elle a subi deux déconvenues majeures : la crise de la zone euro et une crise d'identité. En dépit d'un certain nombre de mesures importantes, la première crise n'est pas encore terminée.

Plenary Session 1. Global Economic Governance

Globalization was once perceived as an irreversible transformation toward a uniform and flat-but-prosperous world. It was as if, at least from an economic viewpoint, the so-called "obstacles" of national or regional identity were to be abolished; as if the whole world were to become a single market, regulated by international organizations and headed by competent technocrats. With the financial and economic crisis of the last five years, we now observe quite different tendencies: more aggressiveness in the assertion of collective identities, more demand for renationalization of economic policies, protectionist pressures, etc. This evolution is visible, even within the rather integrated framework of the European Union. The idea that globalization is irreversible can no longer be taken for granted. The purpose of this session is to assess the stability of the global economic system and to make recommendations on how to strengthen it, in order to preserve the benefits of an open world, all the while paying respect to political demands for collective identities and social justice.

Plenary Session 2. G2?

Although the United States is likely to remain the only superpower for the foreseeable future, China has become a credible challenger. It is now the second largest world economy and, barring an economic or political accident, might become the first in the coming decades. Not only does it endow itself with all the attributes of power, but it behaves more and more like a power in the classical sense, at least in its "near abroad". Both countries are somewhat allergic to multilateralism, but while the United States has developed a sense of leadership during the twentieth century, China has no such historical experience. They do experience tough economic and political competition, especially, but not exclusively, in Asia. Are the US and China heading toward confrontation? Or, alternatively, could there be some kind of "entente, detente and cooperation", to use the old Cold War vocabulary, i.e. some kind of G2? How could such a G2 be acceptable to the rest of the world? What are the forces that will decide which alternative prevails?

Plenary Session 3.

We expect President Mario Monti to present his views on the subject of global governance.

Plenary Session 4. The Future of the EU

The EU is, on a regional level, a unique laboratory of global governance. Yet, in the last few years, it has suffered two major setbacks: the Euro zone crisis and an identity crisis. Despite a number of significant steps, the first crisis is not yet over. If the Euro zone survives, it should emerge much stronger and as the natural core of a rehabilitated Union. How long can we allow the rescue process to last? Could it fail, and could the EU itself resist such a shock? The second crisis, identity, is illustrated by Britain's temptation to distance itself

Si elle survit, la zone euro devrait se renforcer et constituer le cœur naturel d'une Union restaurée. Combien de temps doit-on accorder au processus de sauvetage ? Pourrait-il échouer, et l'UE pourrait-elle résister à un tel choc ? La seconde crise est illustrée par la tentation britannique de s'éloigner de l'UE et par des mouvements nationalistes qui se renforcent, en particulier, mais non exclusivement, dans certains pays récemment devenus membres. L'esprit des pères fondateurs a disparu, et l'UE semble bien avoir perdu son sens d'identité. Ses institutions sont largement perçues comme non démocratiques et inefficaces. Pourtant, sa contribution extraordinaire à la paix et à la prospérité est reconnue par beaucoup dans le monde entier. Son attribution du prix Nobel de la paix, cette année, est un symbole significatif à cet égard. Comment les membres de l'UE pourront-ils se mettre d'accord sur une vision commune de leur avenir commun ? Un tel accord doit-il constituer un préalable à un élargissement futur ?

Session plénière 5. Bonne gouvernance et réussite économique

Le concept de gouvernance est pertinent à différents niveaux. Il se réfère à l'art et la science de fixer et d'atteindre des objectifs dans des systèmes complexes. Une réussite économique durable suppose une «bonne gouvernance» à au moins trois niveaux : (1) au niveau de l'entreprise, ce qui signifie une bonne gestion ; (2) au niveau national, ce qui signifie de bonnes politiques publiques pour assurer un climat qui favorise la croissance et l'emploi dans le court, moyen et long terme, tout en restant socialement acceptable et en préservant l'environnement ; (3) au niveau international, ce qui signifie optimiser la coordination entre les politiques nationales, gérer les externalités et réduire les risques systémiques. Le troisième niveau est crucial si la mondialisation doit survivre. Le but de cette session est d'explorer les relations entre les trois niveaux, et donc les liens entre les affaires et la politique. Comment devrait-on définir la responsabilité sociale des entreprises dans ce contexte ? La diversité des cultures et des valeurs est-elle un atout ou un obstacle ? Les médias ont-ils un rôle spécifique à jouer ?

Session plénière 6. L'avenir du Moyen-Orient

Quelles qu'en soient les causes immédiates, l'origine fondamentale du «printemps arabe» est la non-viabilité de l'ordre qui a émergé dans la région MOAN (Moyen-Orient - Afrique du Nord) à la suite de la décolonisation et dans le contexte de la guerre froide. Le «printemps arabe» a libéré des forces centrifuges puissantes, qui sont maintenant à l'œuvre entre et dans les pays de la région. L'émergence d'un nouvel ordre nécessitera sans doute au moins une génération. Des puissances extérieures vont sûrement exercer une influence sur le processus, du fait que leurs grands intérêts économiques et sécuritaires sont impliqués. En outre, il existe des signes d'un nouveau type de rivalité Est-Ouest dans la région. Ainsi, les membres permanents du Conseil de sécurité sont-ils ouvertement divisés sur la Syrie. Quoi qu'il en soit, le sort de la région MOAN sera probablement déterminé principalement par des facteurs internes, parmi lesquels la culture et l'idéologie joueront un rôle essentiel. Le but de cette session est d'examiner l'avenir du Moyen-Orient au sens large, essentiellement du point de vue de la région elle-même. Quels seront les risques et les opportunités, dans la région et aussi au-delà, dans l'ère post-printemps arabe ?

and by invigorated nationalist movements, especially, but not exclusively, within certain recent member countries. The spirit of the founding fathers is gone, and the EU seems to have lost its sense of identity. Its institutions are widely perceived as undemocratic and inefficient. Yet, its extraordinary contribution to peace and prosperity is recognized by many internationally and symbolized by this year's attribution of the Nobel Peace Prize. How might EU members agree on a common vision of their common future? Is such agreement prerequisite for future enlargement?

Plenary Session 5. Good Governance and Economic Success

The concept of governance is relevant at various levels. It refers to the art and science of setting and reaching goals in complex systems. Sustainable economic success implies "good governance" at at least three levels: (1) at the corporate level, which means good management; (2) at the national level, which means good public policies to ensure a business climate that promotes growth and employment in the short, medium and long term, while remaining socially acceptable and preserving the environment; (3) at the international level, which means optimizing coordination among national policies, managing externalities and reducing systemic risks. The third level is crucial if globalization is to survive. The purpose of this session is to explore the relationship between the three levels, and therefore the links between business and politics. How should we define Corporate Social Responsibility in this context? Is the diversity of cultures and values an asset or an obstacle? Does the media have a specific role to play?

Plenary Session 6. The Future of the Middle East

Whatever its immediate causes, the fundamental cause of the "Arab Spring" is the non-viability of the order that emerged in the MENA region (Middle East - North Africa) in the aftermath of decolonization, and in the context of the Cold War. The "Arab Spring" has released powerful centrifugal forces, which are now at work among and within the region's countries. The emergence of a new order is probably a matter of at least one generation. External powers will clearly influence the process, as their major economic and security interests are involved. Moreover, there is evidence of a new kind of East-West rivalry in the region. Thus, the permanent members of the Security Council are openly divided over Syria. Be that as it may, the fate of MENA is likely to be determined primarily by internal factors, among which culture and ideology will play a crucial role. The purpose of this session is to look at the future of the Middle East at large, essentially from the viewpoint of the region itself. What are the risks and opportunities, in the region and beyond, in the post-"Arab Spring" era?

Plenary Session 7. Africa

Africa is no longer perceived as a lost continent. It enjoys sustainable growth (5% on average over the last decade), with considerable natural and human (demographic bonus) resources. A huge middle class (300 million people) is emerging, together with urbanization. In the long term, good governance and education

Session plénière 7. L'Afrique

L'Afrique n'est plus perçue comme un continent perdu. Elle bénéficie d'une croissance durable (5% en moyenne sur la dernière décennie), avec des ressources naturelles et humaines importantes (bonus démographique). Une immense classe moyenne (300 millions de personnes) est en train d'émerger, en même temps que l'urbanisation. À long terme, la bonne gouvernance et l'éducation – deux facteurs connexes – seront les principaux déterminants de la réussite économique et sociale. Pour le moment, la gouvernance fait quelques progrès, bien que trop souvent des régimes présidentiels forts continuent de coexister avec des États faibles. Une telle situation alimente à la fois la grande et la petite corruption. La fragilité de nombreux États est également une cause majeure de conflits locaux ou régionaux. Il faut reconnaître, cependant, que le nombre et la létalité des conflits en Afrique sont moindres que durant la guerre froide. Dans le même temps, leurs effets externes sont devenus plus importants dans certains cas (Mali). Le but de cette session est d'examiner l'état de l'Afrique dans le contexte de la mondialisation et de la gouvernance mondiale, tant du point de vue politique qu'économique.

Session plénière 8. Débat général

Comme dans les éditions précédentes de la WPC, le débat général portera sur les enjeux actuels, en relation avec la gouvernance mondiale. Ce qui revêt une importance particulière cette année, c'est la perspective d'un leadership stable, à moyen terme, dans trois grands pays : les États-Unis, la Chine et la Russie.

The World Policy Conference, Marrakech, 2010.

– two related factors – will be the key determinants of economic and social success. For the time being, governance is making some progress, although too often strong presidential regimes continue to coexist with weak states. Such a situation feeds both big and small corruption. The fragility of many states is also a major cause for local and regional conflict. It must be recognized, though, that the number and lethality of conflicts in Africa are less than during the Cold War. At the same time, their external effects have in some cases become more important (Mali). The purpose of this session is to look at the state of Africa in the context of globalization and global governance, both from political and economic viewpoints.

Plenary Session 8. General Debate

As in the previous editions of the WPC, the General Debate will focus on current issues in relation to global governance. Of particular importance this year is the prospect of stable, medium-term leadership in three major countries: the United States, China and Russia.

Atelier «Finance»

L'atelier « finance » examinera l'état des réformes de la réglementation financière lancées par la communauté internationale pour éviter une nouvelle crise financière mondiale.

Les problèmes suivants seront examinés en vue d'apporter des réponses à trois questions :

- Quels progrès ont été accomplis à ce jour ?
- Quelles sont les principales faiblesses qui subsistent du point de vue de la stabilité financière ?
- Quelles sont les voies appropriées pour corriger la situation dans une perspective à moyen terme ?

1. Construire des banques solides

Un premier point important est d'évaluer la mise en œuvre actuelle des décisions de Bâle III ; jusqu'à maintenant, seuls 8 des 22 pays membres du Comité de Bâle ont adopté l'ensemble de la réglementation de Bâle III. Il est essentiel d'adopter une législation appropriée le plus vite possible dans toutes les juridictions. Une autre question majeure est celle des risques systémiques et des risques moraux associés aux institutions financières d'importance systémique (IFIS). Pour mettre fin au concept de « trop gros pour faillir » il faut progresser dans un certain nombre de dimensions : les réformes des régimes nationaux de résolution ; les plans propres à chaque IFIS ; une surveillance plus soutenue et plus efficace ; des exigences de fonds propres au-dessus des normes minimales. Une attention particulière devrait également être accordée aux banques ayant une importance systémique au niveau national (D-SIB).

2. La question des « shadow banking » et des non banques

L'objectif de la communauté internationale est de s'assurer que ces formes de finance soient soumises à une surveillance et une régulation appropriées afin de prévenir une crise qui pourrait survenir en dehors du système bancaire réglementé.

Les points suivants devront être particulièrement examinés : l'atténuation de l'effet d'entraînement entre les non banques et le système bancaire, la réduction de la vulnérabilité des marchés monétaires ; l'harmonisation des mesures d'incitation liées à la titrisation pour éviter des effets de levier excessifs dans le système financier ; la supervision vigilante des nouvelles activités de « shadow banking » issues des mutations du marché.

3. Faire face à la procyclicité dans de nombreux aspects du fonctionnement des marchés financiers

Le fonctionnement stable des marchés financiers repose non seulement sur des institutions financières solides, qu'il s'agisse de banques ou non, mais aussi sur une série de facteurs comme, par exemple, les règles comptables, les agences de notation de crédit, l'identification des personnes morales, l'infrastructure des marchés – notamment en ce qui concerne la réforme du marché des dérivés de gré à gré. La communauté internationale doit veiller à ce que nous fassions tout ce qui est possible pour réduire au minimum la tendance du système financier à générer endogènement des alternances d'emballlements et d'effondrements et, ce faisant, pour renforcer la stabilité du système financier mondial.

4. Prévention des risques systémiques et renforcement de la surveillance macroprudentielle

Toutes les dispositions précédentes sont importantes pour minimiser les risques systémiques au niveau des économies prises individuellement, des régions comme la zone euro et l'Union européenne, et de l'économie mondiale dans son ensemble. Il est également nécessaire de faire le point sur les actions des nouvelles institutions créées spécifiquement pour prévenir des risques systémiques, des deux côtés de l'Atlantique, comme le « Conseil européen du risque systémique » (CERS) et le « Conseil de surveillance de la stabilité financière ». Parmi bien d'autres sujets, il est essentiel d'améliorer la gestion macroprudentielle et d'approfondir la compréhension des aspects endogènes de l'instabilité systémique de la finance mondiale ainsi que de la rapidité, devenue extrême, de la transmission des chocs, enfin de l'instabilité financière issue des déséquilibres macroéconomiques.

Workshop “Finance”

The parallel Workshop on Finance will examine the present state of the financial regulatory reforms that have been launched by the International Community to prevent a new global financial crisis. The following issues should be examined with a view to respond on each of them to the three following questions:

- Which progress have been made so far?
- What are the major remaining weaknesses from the financial stability standpoint?
- And what are the appropriate avenues to correct the situation in a medium term perspective?

1. Building resilient banks

A first important point is to assess the present implementation of the Basel III decisions in the various jurisdictions; At this point only 8 of the 22 member jurisdictions of the Basel Committee have issued the full set of the Basel III related regulations.

Passing appropriate legislation as soon as possible in all jurisdictions is of the essence.

Another crucial issue are systemic and moral hazard risks associated with the Systemically Important Financial Institutions (SIFIs). Ending the “too big to fail” concept calls for progress in a number of dimensions which have to be addressed: the reforms of national resolution regimes; the recovery and resolution plans and resolvability assessments for each global SIFI; a more intensive and effective supervision; additional capital requirements above minimum standards. Particular attention should also be given to “Domestically Systemic Important Banks” (D-SIB's).

2. Addressing the issue of shadow banking and non banks

The objective of the International Community is to ensure that shadow banking is subject to appropriate oversight and regulation to address a crisis that could emerge outside the regulated banking system.

The following dimensions should be particularly examined: mitigating the spillover effect between the banking system and the non banks; reducing the vulnerability of Money Market Funds; aligning the incentives associated with securitization to prevent excessive leverage in the financial system; vigilant oversight of new shadow banking activities coming from market mutations.

3. Coping with procyclicality in many dimensions of the financial market's functioning

A first important point is to assess the present implementation of the Basel III decisions in the various jurisdictions; At this point only 8 of the 22 member jurisdictions of the Basel Committee have issued the full set of the Basel III related regulations.

Passing appropriate legislation as soon as possible in all jurisdictions is of the essence.

4. Preventing systemic risks and reinforcing macroprudential oversight

All previous dimensions are important to minimize the systemic risks at the level of the various individual economies, regions, like the Euro area and the European Union and the global economy itself. It is also necessary to take stock of the actions of the new specific institutions created on both sides of the Atlantic on the prevention of systemic risks, like the “European Systemic risk Board” (ESRB) and the “Financial Stability Oversight Council”.

Amongst many other issues a better handling of macroprudentials and a deeper intellectual understanding of the endogenous systemic instability of global finance, of the new extreme rapidity of shocks transmission and of the financial instability consequences of macroeconomic imbalances, appear of the essence.

Atelier «Énergie et environnement»

La quête de l'énergie a toujours été un élément clé des relations internationales, aussi bien en temps de guerre qu'en temps de paix. La pérennité d'un monde ouvert n'est donc pas pensable sans une forme de gouvernance mondiale qui garantisse l'accès de tous les pays à différentes sources d'énergie et à des prix équitables. Avec les préoccupations croissantes concernant le changement climatique, cette nécessité fondamentale a pris une nouvelle dimension. Jusqu'à présent, la «communauté internationale» n'a pas réussi à parvenir à un consensus sur la façon de coopérer à cet égard. Cet atelier sera organisé en trois parties (la majorité du temps sera alloué à la partie III).

La partie I donnera un aperçu de l'état actuel de la question de l'énergie, du point de vue politique, économique et environnemental.

La partie II portera spécifiquement sur la question essentielle des incohérences dans les politiques énergétiques, au niveau mondial, mais aussi au niveau régional. Par exemple, l'Union européenne s'est révélée incapable jusqu'à présent de définir une politique énergétique commune, même si, historiquement, la communauté du charbon et de l'acier a été au cœur de sa fondation.

La partie III se concentrera sur l'offre d'énergie en mettant l'accent sur les nouvelles sources dans le contexte du changement climatique. Cinq thèmes seront abordés : deux techniques (pétrole et gaz non conventionnels, et énergies renouvelables), un social et politique («l'acceptabilité»), un économique (coûts de l'énergie et compétitivité économique), et un international (la géopolitique de l'énergie). Les deux derniers thèmes nous conduiront à nous interroger sur la réalité de l'intégration économique et, plus généralement, sur la mondialisation.

Atelier «Risques majeurs»

L'interdépendance croissante s'accompagne de risques croissants, et parfois imprévisibles. En effet, le nombre des relations non linéaires augmente, ce qui signifie une non proportionnalité entre les causes et les conséquences (ce qu'on nomme «l'effet papillon»). Dans un tel contexte, il arrive souvent que l'on ne puisse plus appliquer les méthodes statistiques classiques – plus ou moins basées sur la loi dite normale, ou loi de Gauss (courbe en cloche). Des catastrophes majeures sont susceptibles de se produire, alors que dans un contexte classique leur probabilité serait considérée comme négligeable. Ces phénomènes soulèvent des questions essentielles sur la prévention et le partage des risques, en particulier pour l'économie de l'assurance. L'atelier sera organisé en trois parties.

La partie I abordera la question des risques majeurs du point de vue de la recherche.

La partie II discutera de la myopie des États. En effet, historiquement parlant, les gouvernements se sont souvent révélés incapables de prévenir les catastrophes, même dans des contextes favorables lorsque les risques pouvaient être clairement identi-fiés, ce qui est typiquement le cas pour de nombreuses questions liées à la démographie. Comment est-il possible d'améliorer à long terme la prise de décision publique concernant des risques plus ou moins bien identifiés, sans tomber dans le piège de la pusillanimité, comme avec certaines interprétations du principe de précaution ? Y a-t-il une corrélation entre la prise de risque collective et les régimes politiques ? Est-ce que la notion de bien public mondial a encore un sens dans le contexte de risques majeurs ?

La partie III traitera de trois exemples très différents : la cybersécurité, qui est maintenant largement reconnue comme un sujet explosif ; le vieillissement, avec ses potentiellement graves conséquences économiques et financières ; et la sécurité alimentaire, qui, au même titre que l'énergie, doit être considérée comme un élément clé de la gouvernance mondiale. Ce ne sont que des exemples. Beaucoup d'autres pourraient être choisis, comme les migrations climatiques, les pandémies ou la sécurité nucléaire. Il convient également de noter que dans les deux autres ateliers de cette édition de la WPC (en particulier l'atelier «Finance») on parlera également des risques majeurs.

Workshop “Energy and Environment”

The quest for energy has always been a key component of international relations, both in times of war and peace. The sustainability of an open world is therefore hardly thinkable without a form of global governance that secures every country's access to various sources of energy at fair prices. With rising concerns about climate change, this fundamental concern has taken an even greater dimension. So far, the “international community” has failed to reach a consensus on how to cooperate on the matter. This workshop will be organized in three parts, though the majority of the time will be consecrated to Part III.

Part I will provide an overview of the current energy scene from political, economic and environmental standpoints.

Part II will specifically address the crucial issue of inconsistencies in energy policies, at regional and international levels. For instance, the European Union has proved thus far unable to create a common energy policy, despite the coal and steel community being the heart of its foundation.

Part III will concentrate on energy supply with an emphasis on new sources in the context of climate change. Five topics will be covered: two technical (unconventional oil and gas, and renewables), one social and political (“acceptability”), one economic (energy costs and economic competitiveness), and one international (the geopolitics of energy). The last two topics will certainly raise questions about economic integration and globalization more generally.

Workshop “Major Risks”

Increasing interdependence is accompanied by increasing, and sometimes unpredictable, risk. This is because the number of non-linear relations increases, i.e. non-proportionality between causes and consequences, or the so-called “butterfly effect”. In such a context, classical statistical methods based on the so-called “normal” or “Gaussian law” (bell curve) often become irrelevant. Major catastrophes are likely to happen, whereas in the classical context their probabilities of occurrence were considered negligible. These phenomena raise vital questions on risk prevention and risk sharing, in particular for insurance economics. The workshop will be organized in three parts:

Part I will address the issue of major risks from the standpoint of research.

Part II will discuss the myopia of states. Historically speaking, governments have proved unable to prevent catastrophes even in favorable contexts when the risks could be clearly identified, as is typically the case for many demography-related risks. How is it possible to improve long-term public decision making under well- or ill-identified risks without falling into the trap of pusillanimity, as with some interpretations of the precautionary principle? Is there a correlation between collective risk taking and political regimes? Does the concept of global public good make any practical sense in the context of major risks?

Part III will cover three disparate examples: cyber security, which is now widely recognized as an explosive issue; aging, with its potentially undermining economic and financial consequences; and food security, which much like energy must be considered as a key component of global governance. It should be noted that the two other parallel workshops, particularly “Finance”, carry an important major risk dimension.

LIEU DE LA CONFERENCE

CONFERENCE VENUE

Hotel Martinez
Situating on the Boulevard de la Croisette and facing the Mediterranean Sea, the Hotel Martinez is recognized as one of the Cote d'Azur's finest establishments. Built in 1929, this Art Deco-style hotel welcomes prestigious events and gatherings throughout the year, especially during the Cannes Film Festival.

CANNES

Située dans le sud-est de la France, au bord de la Méditerranée, Cannes offre un climat et un environnement exceptionnels. Village de pêcheurs dans l'antiquité, la bourgade, apparue au Moyen-âge, se développe modestement durant l'Ancien Régime tout en étant témoin des luttes franco-anglaises et franco-espagnoles qui s'exercent essentiellement sur les îles de Lérins. Ce n'est qu'au XIX^e siècle qu'elle prend véritablement son essor : l'aristocratie anglaise et européenne s'y installe pour la saison hivernale et y édifie de magnifiques demeures secondaires, le tourisme se développe. Cannes possède de nombreux bâtiments publics et édifices religieux à l'architecture remarquable retraçant les diverses époques de son histoire. Mais c'est grâce au Festival de Cannes, un des événements culturels les plus médiatisés au monde, créé en 1946, que Cannes doit sa renommée internationale. Sa notoriété, son histoire et son caractère authentique en ont fait une ville cosmopolite cultivant un certain art de vivre.

Located in south-east France on the Mediterranean coast, Cannes is famous for its outstandingly pleasant climate and high quality environment. In antiquity, Cannes was a fishing village. It became a small town in the Middle Ages and expanded moderately during the Ancien Régime (pre-revolutionary France). During this period, Cannes frequently witnessed the endless battles that formed part of the Franco-English and Franco-Spanish wars, notably for control over the Lérins islands off the Mediterranean coast near Cannes. However, it was the 19th century that really put Cannes on the map when the English and continental European aristocracy started spending the winter seasons there, building sumptuous second homes and attracting more and more tourists. In contemporary Cannes, there are numerous public and religious buildings featuring remarkable architecture that reflects the various periods of its history.

However, since 1946, Cannes owes its international renown to its annual Film Festival, one of the world's cultural events that attracts the most media coverage.

Today, thanks to its fame, history and authenticity, Cannes is a cosmopolitan resort where people cultivate a unique way of life.

Q Cannes has welcomed numerous international conferences (G20, 24th France-Africa Summit...)

L'OCP en quelques mots

Créé en 1920, le Groupe OCP est un leader mondial de la production et de l'exportation de la roche de phosphate, d'engrais phosphatés et de produits dérivés. Ces produits sont une pièce maîtresse de la sécurité alimentaire et de la productivité agricole à l'échelle globale, non seulement en raison des nutriments vitaux qu'ils apportent aux cultures agricoles, mais aussi du fait qu'ils contribuent à reconstituer les sols dégradés.

L'OCP, compagnie Marocaine d'envergure mondiale, est au service de plus de 130 clients, au travers desquels elle soutient les agriculteurs aux quatre coins du monde.

Grâce à ses réserves de phosphate, les plus importantes au monde (essentiellement situées dans le bassin de Khouribga, au centre du Maroc), mais aussi grâce à ses unités de production industrielles et chimiques, et enfin grâce à ses capacités de recherche et développement de pointe, l'OCP est en mesure de répondre de façon innovante et compétitive à la demande mondiale en constante croissance, en proposant une gamme toujours plus complète d'engrais phosphatés adaptés aux spécificités des sols, à la diversité des cultures ainsi qu'aux différentes pratiques agricoles de par le monde.

L'OCP s'engage aussi dans des partenariats de plus en plus nombreux sous forme de joint-ventures -- aussi bien dans le secteur des engrais à proprement dit, que dans des secteurs tels l'ingénierie et le Project-Management -- et ce, avec des partenaires Indiens, Pakistanais, Brésiliens, Américains, Allemands et Belges.

La contribution substantielle de l'OCP au développement économique et social du Maroc fait écho à son engagement au niveau régional et international en tant qu'entreprise citoyenne. Ceci est particulièrement vrai sur le continent Africain où, hormis le fait de renforcer significativement sa présence commerciale, l'OCP promeut activement le développement de l'agriculture, en mettant l'accent sur l'accompagnement des petits exploitants agricoles. Cet engagement est au centre de la Global Food Security Initiative, projet OCP, articulé autour de la promotion de l'innovation et de l'investissement dans le secteur agricole en Afrique et au-delà. En parallèle, la Fondation OCP appuie les projets visant à adapter et à diffuser les meilleures pratiques agricoles, pour le bénéfice de tous.

About the OCP Group

Founded in 1920, the OCP Group is a global leader in the production and export of phosphate rock, phosphate-based fertilizers and related products. These products are an important component of global food security and agricultural productivity, as they provide essential nutrients to food crops and help rebuild healthy soils. A Moroccan company with global reach, OCP serves a network of over 130 customers on 5 continents, and through them supports farmers in all corners of the planet.

The combination of the world's largest phosphate reserves (located mostly in the Khouribga basin in the center of Morocco), cutting-edge chemical and production facilities, and world-class research and development capacities, permits OCP to respond creatively and cost-effectively to growing global demand for an ever-wider range of phosphate-based fertilizers suitable to the specific soil types, crops and cultivation practices of farmers worldwide.

OCP also has a growing number of joint ventures - both in the fertilizer sector and in fields such as engineering and project management - with partners from countries such as India, Pakistan, Brazil, the United States, Germany and Belgium.

OCP's strong contribution to Morocco's economic and social development is mirrored by its growing engagement as a "corporate citizen" at the regional and global level. On the African continent in particular, OCP is substantially expanding not only OCP's commercial presence but its overall efforts to promote agricultural development, with a particular emphasis on helping smallholder farmers. This effort is a key part of OCP's new Global Food Security Initiative, focused on promoting innovation and investment in agriculture in Africa and beyond. At the same time, the OCP Foundation is supporting major efforts to share and adapt agricultural best practices from around the world, for the benefit of farmers everywhere.

Agir de manière responsable pour l'accès à l'énergie du plus grand nombre dans un monde où la demande ne cesse de croître.

Ouverte à Cotonou en juin 2005, la Fondation Zinsou a tout d'abord été un lieu d'exposition pour les artistes contemporains africains et/ou des artistes travaillant sur des thématiques liées à l'Afrique. Forte de ses expériences sur le terrain, cette première vocation artistique et culturelle, s'est étendue pour devenir pédagogique et sociale. Le développement, la réduction de la pauvreté et l'éducation sont au cœur de son projet, au même titre que la valorisation du patrimoine artistique et culturel de l'Afrique. Consciente des réalités socio-culturelles du Bénin, la Fondation Zinsou a à cœur de rendre l'accès à toutes ses activités, libres et gratuits. En décembre 2012, la Fondation Zinsou peut se résumer en 10 chiffres ; 7 ans d'existence, 20 expositions fixes et 11 expositions itinérantes dans le sud du Bénin, plus de 3 500 000 visiteurs, 12 livres d'art publiés, 260 écoles en partenariat, 400 professeurs formés aux expositions d'art par notre équipe de médiation culturelle, 120 emplois créés en équivalent plein temps, 4 minibibliothèques et 1 événement de danse contemporaine. Initiative familiale et privée, ce qui rend unique son fonctionnement, la Fondation Zinsou n'a pour vocation ni de supplanter ni de répliquer les organismes existants. Ce projet résolument «afrooptimiste», est enrichi chaque jour par la constitution d'une équipe mixte tant dans le genre que dans les provenances géographiques.

Started in June 2005 in Cotonou, Benin, the Zinsou Foundation was originally an exhibition space for contemporary African artists and those working on African-related themes. After enjoying a great deal of on the ground success, its artistic and cultural missions added a pedagogical and social dimension. Development, poverty reduction and education are now at the core of its mission on par with its historic promotion of Africa's cultural and artistic heritage. Conscientious of Benin's socio-cultural realities, the Zinsou Foundation strives to make all of its activities open and free of charge to all. In December 2012, the Zinsou Foundation can be summed up in a few numbers: 7 years of existence, 20 permanent exhibits and 11 travelling exhibits, over 3.5 million visitors, 12 published art books, 260 partner schools, 400 professors trained in art interpretation, 120 full-time jobs created, 4 Mini Libraries and 1 contemporary dance event. The Zinsou Foundation is a private, family initiative and does not seek to supplant or replicate existing actors. This resolutely "afro-optimistic" project is enriched each and every day by its dedicated and diverse team of men and women.
