Group Chief Technology Officer and Group Executive Board Member of Capgemini

Welcome to this fourth edition of the Young Leaders panel. Back in 2016, Thierry de Montbrial challenged Song-Nim and me to bring in the perspective of the new generation in our discussions. Today, we are gathering young leaders whom have been identified over the years, coming from both the public and private sectors, so that we can present the audience with different perspectives that will add to the agenda of the World Policy Conference.

This year, we will discuss climate change, which I see as a growing concern in my discussions with enterprise leaders. Here in Marrakech, we had a great debate between Laurent Fabius and Patrick Pouyanné as well as a dedicated workshop on energy and the environment with a report back this morning. We hear a lot of criticisms about the young generation taking to the streets and making their voice heard, but not doing much to change things. With this panel, we hope to show you Young Leaders who are actually changing the world
